DETAILED ACTION

Claims 1-38 are pending in the present application. No claims have been amended.

Response to Arguments

Claims 1-38 stand rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Hinchliffe et al. (U. S. Patent 5,637,504), in view of Hoffman et al. (US Patent 5,844,089), Buxton (US Patent 5,646,037) and Henry et al. (US Patent 5,529,912) for the reasons already of record and those set forth below in response to Applicant's remarks.

As interpreted by the examiner the claims are drawn to a diploid Saccharomyces yeast cell that contains at least one functional copies of the INO1 gene. The limitations that additional functional copies is met so long as the cells are capable of having additional copies of the INO1 gene inserted into mutation loci. Absent evidence to the contrary and given that the cited art does teach the elements of the claims, the cells would inherently be capable of the insertion of the gene. Indeed, Hinchliffe et al. teach FLP recombination which shows that the cells are capable of insertion. Although dependent claims have further limitations, it is this element found in all the claims included the broadest claim that Applicant's arguments are based upon.

The basis for Applicant's arguments with regard to Hinchliffe et al., Hoffman et al. and Buxton revolves around the proposition that not one of these references teach a yeast integration element comprising a 2 micron element. First, it should be noted by Applicant that these references were not cited for the disclosure of an integration plasmid or 2 micron element. Indeed, a review of the claims themselves shows that neither an integration plasmid nor a 2 micron element is not recited. Therefore, Applicant is relying on limitations not found in the claims to refute the cited references.

Applicant also argues that Buxton teaches away from the present invention because Buxton “points out the disadvantages of integration plasmids.” Because the integration plasmids are not specifically claimed, only the elements of the yeast cell, then Buxton is not a true teaching away from the cell of the claims.

Conclusion

THIS ACTION IS MADE FINAL. Applicant is reminded of the extension of time policy as set forth in 37 CFR 1.136(a).

A shortened statutory period for reply to this final action is set to expire THREE MONTHS from the mailing date of this action. In the event a first reply is filed within TWO MONTHS of the mailing date of this final action and the advisory action is not mailed until after the end of the THREE-MONTH shortened statutory period, then the shortened statutory period will expire on the date the advisory action is mailed, and any extension fee pursuant to 37 CFR 1.136(a) will be calculated from the mailing date of the advisory action. In no event, however, will the statutory period for reply expire later than SIX MONTHS from the mailing date of this final action.
